LAWYERS NOW HAVE PRINCIPAL ROLES IN HAUPTMANN'S LEGAL DRAMA

Closeups of Seven Attorneys for Prosecution, Defense — Attorney General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey Will Head Prosecution—Was Once a Newspaper Man

This is the twelfth and final article of a series on the Lindbergh case and the forthcoming trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Dec. 22 — (INS) — A great courtroom drama is looming just ahead—the trial, opening January 2, of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, accused of the murder of the Lindbergh baby.

In the center of the courtroom arena will be a brilliant array of lawyers, the men who will take part in the mighty battle of "the State versus the Defense." They will be in the world spotlight. Newspaper men will write thousands of words about the counsel in this celebrated case.

Wilentz, Reilly, Hauck, Fisher, Lanigan, Lager, Pope. These are the names of attorneys whose names will constantly recur in newspaper copy; whose names will be carried in dispatches sent to all parts of the world.

Heading the prosecution will be Attorney-General David T. Wilentz of New Jersey, who was "once a newspaper man himself." Only 39, he will cut a fine figure in the courtroom. Sleek-haired, dark-skinned, dark-eyed, with a magnificent command of the English language, he has the manners of a Chesterfield and the eloquence of a Demosthenes.

Pitted against him as chief counsel for the defense will be Edward J. Reilly, veteran of the New York bar, who has tried more than 1,000 murder cases with amazing success. Stocky of build, ruddy faced, with sparse gray-brown hair and a deep clear voice, Reilly has a personality that is certain to click in a big way and make legal history in Hunterdon county.

Wilentz will be assisted by the capable and courteous Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., prosecutor of Hunterdon county; the brainy "Joe" Lanigan, assistant attorney general; the experienced George K. Large of Flemington, and others.

Co-operating with Reilly as co-counsel for the defense will be the astute and forceful Lloyd Fisher of Flemington and F. A. Pope, a highly regarded lawyer of Somerset.

The chief of the prosecution forces, Wilentz, is one of the most brilliant lawyers in New Jersey. At 39 he has made a name for himself in Jersey politics and already there are expectations that some day he will be governor.

Wilentz is affable, friendly and co-operative. He never seems pressed for time, busy as he is. He has a fine sense of humor. He dresses in the best of taste and will be one of the Beau Brummels of the courtroom.

As a young man just out of school he took up journalism. He was one of the best reporters on the Plainfield (N. J.) Courier-News. But even in these early days he had his eye on the legal profession.

Wilentz lived in Perth Amboy as a young man (and still lives there). He was graduated from the Perth Amboy High School. His career, however, was interrupted by the World War. He enlisted in 1917. Late in 1919 he returned and completed his course in the New York law school. He was admitted to the bar. His first venture into public office was in 1922 when he became city attorney of Perth Amboy.

He has had considerable experience in trying criminal cases. He handled himself admirably during the Hauptmann extradition proceedings in New York a couple of months ago.

He is married and has three children. He seems to have no hobbies except to spend his days in the practice of his profession and his evenings with his family.

Reilly, the chief of the defense, has practised in both New York and New Jersey for 25 years. In that time he has defended every woman accused of murder in Brooklyn, with two exceptions, and he won acquittal in every case.

He attended St. Lawrence University. He was admitted to the bar in 1904. He was born in Brooklyn, has lived there all his life and has his offices there. He has specialized in criminal cases.

He has a good "jury manner." In some respects he is a second Clarence Darrow. His manner is one of warm and easy-going joviality, combined with penetrating determination.

His theory in murder cases is that a lawyer does not get any too much help from the defendant. He banks on

NEWTOWN COUPLE WAS MARRIED 70 YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. Winfield S. Ellis Receiving Felicitations Today

ENJOYING FAIR HEALTH

NEWTOWN, Dec. 22 — In these days of domestic turmoil and races to Reno to annul marriage vows, it is refreshing to come across a couple who have lived happily together for nearly three-quarters of a century, and assert with certainty that, were they to live their lives over again, each would select none but the other one as a life partner.

This venerable couple consists of Mr. and Mrs. Winfield S. Ellis, of this borough, who were married on December 22, 1864, in Philadelphia, by the Rev. Hanna, a clergyman of the Presbyterian Church. The ceremony was a double one, a brother of Mrs. Ellis, the late William A. Gorton, being wedded to Sarah Knox at the same time.

Mr. Gorton, like Mr. Ellis, was a veteran of the Civil War, where he saw hard fighting and sustained severe wounds, being shot through the face at the Battle of Cold Harbor. Mr. and Mrs. Gorton, who resided in Bristol for many years, are both deceased.

Winfield S. Ellis was born at Buckmanville, Bucks County, June 9, 1842. He is a son of the late George Brown and Amy (Atkinson) Ellis. His father was an historical steel engraver, who won recognition at an early age in the art of illustrating books and magazines, several of his engravings appearing in a Philadelphia edition of Goldsmith's Animated Nature, published in 1823, when he was only 20 years of age.

Two brothers of George B. Ellis—Edwin M., and William H.—were also steel engravers, and the work of the three brothers is to be found in the books of Lord Byron, Sir Walter Scott, Hume's, Mollet and Miller's History of England, Godey's Lady's Book, Graham's Magazine and many other publications of the early part of the last century. The father of the three brothers, David Ellis, came from Wales about 1795, and he and his oldest son are said to have lost their lives subsequently at sea. Amy Atkinson, mother of Winfield S. Ellis, was a direct descendant of Mary Smith, daughter of Yorkshire, England, and settled in Wrightstown, Bucks County, marrying Mary Crossdale in 1690. Mary Smith married John Atkinson in 1717, and they purchased and located on the Atkinson farm at Windy Bush, near Buckmanville, that is still in possession of the Atkinson family after 217 years.

Winfield S. Ellis saw service in the Civil War, both as a carpenter in reconstruction work, and as a soldier in Company F, 40th Pennsylvania Regiment. He is a carpenter by trade, at which he was actively engaged for nearly 70 years. Learning the trade with his future brother-in-law, the late Garrett B. Gorton, he became proficient in practically all branches of wood-working. He helped construct the George School at Newtown, and when it was completed in 1893 he was retained there to direct the interior carpenter work at the institution, which gave him the sobriquet "the artist in wood."

In extending felicitations to Mr. and Mrs. Ellis ten years ago upon the occasion of the 60th anniversary of their marriage, Francis C. Pyle, treasurer of George School, wrote Mr. Ellis: "It has been a pleasure to me as well as to the committee of management that thee has had so important a part in the material growth of the school. Allow me to say that it has been a satisfaction to us to know that the foundation upon which the school is laid as well as the fabric of its construction."

LEPTOSOMES AND PYKNICS

A Brooklyn psychology professor has gone to considerable lengths to prove that leptosomes do not differ essentially from pyknics in mental or emotional equipment. In case the reader finds this as confusing as we ourselves did at first glance, we shall explain at once that in general a pyknic is any broad, thickset and plumpish person, while a leptosome is one who inclines to be tall and lean.

It seems a professor at some German institution of higher learning had spent a long time measuring leptosomes and pyknics and had come to the conclusion that a majority of the former definitely were introverts and that the latter tended as strongly toward extroversion.

If the German professor reacts in kind, he probably will begin measuring all over again, or else will catch the first boat for New York with a view to checking up on possible variations from type or other unfair tactics on the part of the Brooklyn supply of leptosomes and pyknics. However, we are less interested in the outcome of the controversy than in the addition of two such fascinating words to the popular vocabulary. How many calories make a pyknic?

MONOGRAMS

Add to current signs of returning prosperity the fact that shops again are advertising monogrammed shirts. For the wise, this vies with increased movie attendance, the composite business index and motor car purchases in forecasting a sunrise soon to follow the night of economic distress.

Always, the advance of an economic society beyond that point where all energy must be expended on the mere finding of food, clothing, shelter and security has been signaled by the striving of its members for a means of expressing their individuality. This activity embraces the achievements of the race in poetry, music and painting and in such monuments as the Great Pyramid and the Woolworth Building. In a smaller way it finds expression in the monogram on the shirtfront, which accordingly symbolizes the grandeur of the ages, the margin above mere survival which we call civilization.

ON WITH IT, IF—!

If there's no need to go again into the crowded stores; if, after standing in line at the postoffice a long time, the parcels are all mailed; if the list of greetings is all made out, with no one overlooked, and the cards also are in the postoffice to be delivered at the right time; if the family gifts are all stowed away, each set in a safe hiding place and each gift with a gaily little name-tag on it—stowed away to pop out in a series of glorious surprises at the right moment; if the tree and its decorations are ready, too, so that the business of setting it up may get smartly into motion Monday night; if also the eye for preparedness sees that the Christmas dinner will eventuate with adequate substance and garnishments and not undue labor; if all these miracles and deeds performed, then, from the old-fashioned folks at least, let a great shout go aloft, "Come on, Christmas Day!"

With all in readiness, by the bells ring out and songs of joy carol from house to house.

Lawyers Now Have Principal Roles In Hauptmann's Drama

Reilly was the first president of the Kings County (N. Y.) Criminal Bar Association and now is chairman of the board of that organization.

Prosecutor Hauck of Hunterdon County, in whom Wilentz is placing great reliance, is in charge of gathering and arranging evidence in the Hauptmann trial.

Hauck was born in Jersey City, July 24, 1901. He was graduated from the Somerville (N. J.) High School, Western University and the New Jersey Law School. Before becoming a lawyer himself he worked for a law firm in Clinton, near Flemington. He was admitted to the New Jersey bar in 1929. He served one term in the House of Assembly before winning his present post.

Hauck is married and father of one child. He has shown himself extremely courteous despite the pressure put upon him by this case. He is a member of several Masonic fraternal organizations and, in addition to being prosecutor of Hunterdon County he is counsel for the boroughs of Clinton and Hampton.

Lanigan will be one of Wilentz's "right hand men." Whenever New Jersey becomes involved in important litigation, either criminal or civil, Assistant Attorney General Joseph L. Lanigan has been assigned as chief of the attorney general.

Lanigan has figured in innumerable legal entanglements on the state's side, his duty invariably being to arrange the state's case. He has a splendid knowledge of the affairs of the state.

He was born April 14, 1891, in Trenton, N. J. He has been associated with the attorney general's office for 20 years. He is married and the father of two children.

Lloyd Fisher, who will help Reilly try to free Hauptmann or save his life, is a keen lawyer who is regarded by members of his profession as likely to have a notable future.

Fisher is a Flemington product. He was educated in the local schools and from here he went to the Dickinson School of Law at Carlisle, Pa. He was admitted to the bar at 24. He has had a prominent part in many local cases.

One of the high spots of Fisher's legal career was his brilliant defense of John Hughes Curtis, the Norfolk, Va., ship builder, who achieved nationwide publicity when he was in contact with the kidnapers of the Lindbergh baby. It developed into one of the many typical false alarm Lindbergh case stories and Curtis was ultimately tried in Flemington for his deception. He was convicted but his sentence was suspended after the payment of a fine. Everybody who watched Fisher in action as defense counsel agreed he handled the case with extraordinary skill.

Fisher served with the 113th Infantry, New Jersey National Guard, during the world war. He now is 37 years old. He is married.

George K. Large, who will be on the prosecution's side, is president of the Hunterdon County Bar Association. He was born in Flemington and was graduated from Princeton University and the New York School of Law. He also is president of the Flemington Water Co. and is prominent in civic affairs. He is married and has lived in Flemington all his life.

F. A. Pope of defense counsel, is well-known in Somerville, N. J., where the famous Hall-Mills trial was held. There he has a reputation of being an able and conscientious lawyer.

These men, more than any others, now are the principal actors in the Hauptmann drama. Even that of Hauptmann is subordinate now.

and voted for Lincoln in 1864. While he does not enjoy the best of health, he is very active for one of his years, and is particularly fond of cooking, at which he is a past master, having learned the art when a boy. He is a daily reader of newspapers, and actively interested in current events.

Mrs. Ellis is a daughter of the late James and Mary (Martindell) Gorton. She was born October 9, 1843, one of a family of 12 children, eight of whom lived beyond the three-score and ten period. Her early years were spent in a dwelling adjoining the old coconery just off the "Buck" Road, which leads from Newtown to Somerton.

It was there about a century ago that silk-worm enthusiasts sought to make their fortunes through cultivating mulberry trees to furnish food for the silk worms. The "craze" spread over a large area, fabulous prices were paid for the trees and the land on which to raise them, and fortunes were made overnight. When it was realized that the enthusiasts had been over-ambitious and that there really was no such actual profit in the business, the whole scheme collapsed, and fortunes were lost as quickly as they had been made.

The Gorton family moved away from the coconery property about 80 years ago, and some years later the buildings were torn down. Last Spring the George School "History Hobby Group" consisting of young men in the history class of Professor Walter H. Mohr, decided to locate if possible the site of the old coconery buildings, which had long since been plowed over and the field planted with corn and other crops. Mrs. Ellis was invited to visit the place which is on a property adjoining that of the George School, and try to find the location. Although partly blinded by cataracts, on both eyes, she pointed out what she thought to be the place. The young men began to dig and it was not long before bits of brick, plaster and broken crockery were found. Soon after, some of the foundation walls were located, and the general plan of the buildings ascertained. The excavations were filled in again, and corn once more waved over the site last Summer. It is the hope of the George School authorities however, to place a marker on the site.

Like her husband, Mrs. Ellis is very alert, too, for one of her years, although she admits she does not feel as young as she once did. She still does a large part of the housework, although she can no longer see to read. She is a member, too, of the Episcopal Church, and has been for nearly 70 years. As long as her health permitted she was an active worker in the Sunday School and in the local W. C. T. U.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis have two sons—the Rev. Charles G. Ellis, a Presbyterian clergyman of Margaretville, N. Y., and William J. Ellis, editor of the Langhorne Delaware Valley Advance. Two children are deceased—Amy Rebecca and Benjamin Franklin Ellis.

LANGHORNE

State Senator Clarence Buckman, Republican representative in the State Assembly from this district, moved from his former residence on County Road, Parkland, to the renovated estate of the late U. S. Congressman Henry W. Watson, Maple avenue, Langhorne.

For years, Senator Buckman lived across from his brother, J. Hibbs Buckman, operating jointly the farm lands on both properties.

When the honorable Congressman Watson died last year, the estate was obtained by Mr. Buckman. A large force of carpenters, painters and others have worked all Summer remodeling the dwelling.

YUGOSLAVIA ENDS MOURNING SILENCE

BELGRADE — (INS) — With the expiration of the period of deep mourning for the assassinated King Alexander, strict regulations are being eased but public dancing will not be permitted until six months after his death.

During the period of deep mourning no music could be played in the cafes. Neither was card, domino or billiard playing permitted in the public recreation rooms. Music may now be played publicly.

WASNT HUNGRY, SO JUST ATE 80 "DOGS"

BELGRADE — (INS) — Dragolju Illic wasn't very hungry, otherwise he might have bettered his record of 80 sausages at one sitting.

Illic, a carpenter, devoured 80 of the Serbian "hot dogs" called "cevapici," highly spiced roasted pieces of lamb, pork and veal, washing them down with four bottles of wine.

He started fast on his first 40, but lagged a little the next ten and coasted on toward 60. There the going got tough and he barely limped through the last 20.

A large crowd watched him and applauded his efforts.

DUCKS FEEL WEATHER

BOSTON — (INS) — Ducks are falling victims to wintry blasts in belated dashes south. One was found frozen in the ice of Muddy River while a second was taken to Angell Animal Hospital after floundering about helplessly on the ice, a victim of pneumonia.

ETERNAL QUADRANGLE

NICOSIA, Cyprus — (INS) — Two Greek cafe-owners who had long been friends and lived near to each other in a village in the Limassol district preferred each other's wives to their own. They thought it would be a good idea to exchange. The wives did not object, so the transfer has been carried out. All four remain the best of friends.

BIRD TRAPS SELF

QUINCY, Mass. — (INS) — Sergt. H. F. Corbett was riding along the shore front in his patrol car, listening to the police radio broadcast, when the radio stopped suddenly. Corbett got out of the car to investigate and found—a sea gull wrapped up in the antenna atop the car. The bird was beyond repair, but Corbett managed to repair the antenna.
